Handwritten Chinese characters in cursive script (草书) on aged paper. The characters are dark and expressive, with prominent thick strokes and fluid connections. The central character is highly stylized and appears to be '世' (Shì), with a large, sweeping top stroke and a curved bottom stroke. To its left and right are other characters, including '山' (Shān) and '山' (Shān), which are also written in a cursive style. The paper is yellowed and shows signs of wear.

Handwritten text in red ink on aged paper, consisting of several characters in a stylized script. The characters are arranged horizontally across the page. The first character is partially cut off on the left edge. The second character is a square-like shape with a curved top. The third character is a large, complex shape with a central loop and a long, sweeping tail that extends downwards and then curves back to the right. The fourth character is a square-like shape with a curved top, similar to the second character. The fifth character is partially cut off on the right edge.

Handwritten characters in black ink on aged paper, possibly representing a stylized symbol or a character from an ancient script. The characters are dark and somewhat irregular, suggesting they were written with a brush or a similar tool. The first character is a large, curved shape with a small opening at the top. The second character is a long, vertical stroke with a slight curve at the bottom. The third character is a smaller, curved shape at the bottom left.
