Village
slums. Going up from Green's Town towards the "station" after one or two bigger men / ex.m. Stephen White's/ possessions there is the village slum. Grass houses and children in rags. Stopped at one of such grass houses, just below the house of Slater and Reuben Mendez. In front of it a small patch of cabbages and some tomatoes. The owner of the house is Miss Lindo. She got the house and some land about one acre from her brother, who died recently in Manchester. It was for her and her two children. She is old and feels sick. She had pains in her legs and had to take the shoes off. /?/ It is 13 years she is sick. She waters her vegetable garden - so she says twice a day. She has sown herself the cabbage and then planted it. At this moment old "Cousin" Brown appeared. Miss Lindo said he was the father of her daughter "I had a daughter for him". He was not ~~so~~ very pleased of her revelation, but she didn't take notice. She insisted of being called Miss Lindo, not Mistress Lindo. She asked Brown to stop for a while as she had some business, - something to give him.
