

Handwritten text in an ancient script, likely Coptic, on a narrow, aged parchment strip. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The script is dense and cursive, with some characters appearing to be in a different script or dialect. The parchment is heavily stained and shows signs of significant wear, including a large dark hole in the center. The strip is held flat by metal strips on the left and right sides.

Fragment of an ancient papyrus scroll with several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is written in dark ink on aged, yellowish-brown papyrus. The script is dense and difficult to decipher, but appears to be a form of Greek or Latin. The fragment is held open by metal clips on the left and right sides. There is a significant dark stain or hole in the center of the fragment, obscuring some of the text. The edges of the papyrus are frayed and uneven.

Fragment of an ancient papyrus scroll with several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is densely packed and appears to be a form of shorthand or a specific dialect. The scroll is heavily aged, showing significant discoloration and a large dark stain in the center. The text is written in dark ink on a yellowish-brown background.

Fragment of a vertical inscription on the right edge of the scroll, written in a similar cursive script. It appears to be a marginal note or a separate entry.