

Fragment of a medieval manuscript page, likely a calendar or liturgical book, written in Gothic script on aged parchment. The text is organized into columns and rows, with some lines containing large initials or decorative elements. The parchment is heavily stained and shows signs of significant wear and tear.

The text is written in Gothic script, likely a medieval Latin or Germanic language. The script is dense and fills most of the page. There are several lines of text, with some lines containing large, ornate initials or decorative elements. The parchment is heavily stained and shows signs of significant wear and tear, particularly along the edges and in the center.

Key features include:

- Multiple columns of text, separated by vertical lines.
- Large, decorative initials, possibly in red or gold, marking the beginning of sections.
- Significant staining and discoloration, particularly in the center and along the edges.
- A small, dark mark or hole on the right side of the fragment.

Fragment of a medieval manuscript page, likely a calendar or liturgical book, written in Gothic script on aged parchment. The text is organized into columns by vertical red lines. A prominent red initial 'I' is visible in the center. The parchment shows signs of wear, including staining and a small tear on the right edge.

[Faint, mostly illegible Gothic script text, likely a calendar or liturgical book fragment.]

I ...

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Gothic or Carolingian minuscule, written on a long, narrow strip of parchment. The text is arranged in approximately seven lines, with some words appearing to be in red ink (rubrics). The parchment is heavily aged, showing significant discoloration and wear, particularly at the edges. The script is dense and fills most of the width of the strip.

Vertical text written along the right edge of the parchment strip, possibly serving as a marginal note or a reference to another page.

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Gothic or Carolingian minuscule, on a long, narrow, aged parchment strip. The text is arranged in approximately six lines. The script is dense and characteristic of the period. A prominent red initial 'L' is visible in the fourth line, marking the beginning of a section. The parchment shows signs of wear, including creases and discoloration.

Vertical text on the right edge of the parchment strip, possibly a marginal note or a reference number, written in a smaller script.

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely Gothic or Carolingian minuscule, written on a long, narrow strip of parchment. The text is arranged in approximately seven lines. The script is dense and characteristic of the Middle Ages. A notable feature is the use of red ink for certain words, particularly in the middle section, which is a common practice for initials or specific terms in medieval manuscripts. The parchment shows signs of age, including discoloration and some wear along the edges.

Vertical text written along the right edge of the parchment strip, possibly serving as a marginal note or a reference to the source of the document.