Fragment of an ancient papyrus scroll with several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is arranged in approximately four horizontal lines across the length of the fragment. The script is dense and difficult to decipher due to the fragment's condition and the nature of the papyrus material. The fragment is held in place by two strips of translucent tape on the left and right edges.

Fragment of a parchment scroll with handwritten text in a medieval script. The text is arranged in several lines across the length of the strip. The parchment is heavily aged, showing significant discoloration and wear, particularly along the edges and in the center where there is a large tear. The script is a dense, cursive hand, likely a form of Gothic or Carolingian minuscule. The text is difficult to decipher due to the damage and the angle of the fragment, but it appears to be a continuous passage of text. The fragment is held in place by two white strips of tape on the left and right sides.

Fragment of a parchment scroll with handwritten text in a medieval script. The text is arranged in several lines across the length of the strip. The parchment is heavily aged, showing a yellowish-brown color and significant texture. The script is a dense, cursive hand, likely a form of Gothic or Carolingian minuscule. The text is difficult to decipher due to the damage and the style of the handwriting, but it appears to be a continuous passage of text. The fragment is roughly rectangular with irregular, torn edges, particularly on the left and right sides. The text is written in dark ink, and the overall appearance is that of an ancient historical document.
